Cincinnati's Nickname.

The nickname of Porkopolis is of English origin and was the brilliant inspiration of a sponsor who never saw Cincinnati. In the year 1825 there flourished in the Queen City a gentleman named Jones. He was the president of the United States Branch Bank and was locally known as "Bank Jones." The pork trade had already taken such proportions as to raise the financial enthusiasm of Bank Jones, and in a succession of letters he dilated upon the pork prospects of the Queen City. The letters were addressed to the Liverpool correspondent of the Cincinnati bank, and this gentleman's imagination at length became fired by Bank Jones' enthusiasm. In a moment of wild generosity he hid him to the studio of some Liverpoolian Thorywaldsen and ordered the construction of what is set down in the annals as "a unique pair of model hogs." These noble effigies were made of papier-mache and were sent out to Cincinnati as a present, accompanied by the inscription—destined in part at least to become famous—"To Mr. George W. Jones, as the worthy representative of Porkopolis."

The hogs have still a local habitation and a name. They add to the burden of life in the office of one of the largest "slaughterers" of Cincinnati, having passed by inheritance from Bank Jones down, from hand to hand, among the pork monarchs of Porkopolis, for nigh upon half a century.—[Olive Logan, in Harper's Magazine.]

This is the way Dr. Woods, of the Bowling Green Gazette, kept intact that heavy hirsute top knot of his; One of the most effectual preventives against hair shedding, so common to some heads, as well as the very best remedy against excessive and rapid dandruff accumulation, is a once-or-twice-a-week washing of the scalp with pure castile soap and rain or cistern water the temperature of summer rain. Wash early in the morning when first rising, then dry the head by brisk, vigorous friction, and you will not only escape any danger of catching cold, but you will have a soft, clean head of hair and a scalp as clean as a lovely woman's neck after a Sunday morning's bath.

Hester Stuart writes of the old maid: "Her days are days of pleasantness and her nights are nights of peace. She goes to bed when she pleases and does not leave one ear uncovered to listen for the uncertain steps and wavering night-key of a late-coming husband. Neither does she turn restlessly on her pillow beside a sober, snoring spouse, and wonder, and wonder where the children's school books or the family flannels are to come from; but she drops into peaceful slumber to dream of her old love and wakes to wonder whether married life with him could ever have become the sordid, meager affair which it is to so many husbands and wives."

On the occasion of a great feast given by Alexander II, in Russia some years ago, tables were provided, each capable of seating 30,000 people or so; fountains were running with Crimean wine; immense tanks were filled with kysse; and sheep and oxen were roasted whole before huge bonfires. The sight of the food was too much for the howling appetites of the assembled crowd and long before the feast was really a general scrabble took place. The viands were trampled in the dust, many persons narrowly escaped being drowned in the vats of beer, and the czar's gifts were literally thrown to the winds.

The Spurgeon sermons by cable enterprise has petered out. They didn't pay. It is much cheaper to have Beecher's and Talmage's out and dried orations mailed two or three days before they are delivered, and then published in the great morning dailies as special dispatches. It fools the unsophisticated, just as the patent outside does the country greenhorn, who brags on his home paper's enterprise "in getting in" so much news, and poetry and such truck.—[Yeoman.]

And here is a Sunday school boy, who, when asked to stand up and say his verse, did it thus: "Be not overcome of evil, but come it over evil with good."

Waiting Our Country Cousins.

The season is with us when the city man, with his wife, his children and the servants, squares accounts with his cousins in the country. The latter individual has ten months of the year to call his own, but it shall not be the fault of his city relatives if he has any part and parcel of the other two. This is the metropolitan citizen's season, and he is given to improving it. The dewberries redden the hill-side; the raspberries, pink and delicate, hang full-fruited on the vine that clammers up the garden wall; the harvest apple grows golden with the autumnal kisses of the warm June sun; the spring chicken has attained a fullness of days that ripen it for the broiler. Not unless his right hand has forgotten its cunning, or he has gone long on hard, will the city man permit these summer glories to perish from the earth and not be there to see and expedite their going.

All the world is going away, and why should he be immured within beated walls and walk on brazen streets when just beyond the blue line of hills that gird the city about, are peace and rest and purring brooks and spring lambs and the tender chicken, vegetables fresh with the odor of the earth about them, and all this for a pittance a week with careful attention thrown in for good measure?

There, on the carpet of bluegrass, under the spreading tree, he will loaf and enjoy his soul during the heated term, far from the city's dust and turmoil, its hill collectors and book agents, its amateur performances and all the other ills that make up the woes unutterable of a hot term in a city. He will forget these as he idles away the long days under the trees, and if he is young and susceptible, will make love to brown-faced, bright-eyed country lasses—God bless them every one—and make their dear little hearts very sad when the shorter days have come, and his face turns back toward the turmoil and worry and work awaiting the coming back of the errant ones who have strayed along the country side.

These be the days when life is worth the living in a rare old country house. Lazily pass the days, and the nights, rarer than the poet's day in June, give back the fullest recompense when the drowsy god is wooed. While one could wish the evening concert of the quercus frog, just over the way by the banks of the pond, were more musical, yet his base notes are unaccompanied by the fine tenor of the city mosquito, and this is something for which to give thanks. Though bats fly in at the open window, they are less harmful than the enterprising burglar who, equally uninvited, comes in at his city home to make free with his spoons and walk away with his purse and watch. Let it rain never so hard on the day set for the excursion with his pretty cousin, yet will no suspicion of water turn his mind away from the principles of prohibition and the fine theories of the temperance folk, when the cream-flaked milk is poured out at the table set on the lawn for the evening meal.

If, perchance, the staid old family carriage horse be innocent of better time than a mile in five minutes, he can get that from him without the young man from the livery stable calling the next day with his "four-dollars-an-hour" bill, as is the case when one has taken the drive down Chestnut street at home.

Though the mail arrives but once a week, he need not despair of the Republic, for he has not left the affairs of the nation in the hands of the gentlemen of the press, and are they not therefore safe?

Know, gentle reader, that none of these things herein set forth are for the man of the newspaper. For him there is no summer loitering. He remains at home and discovers Presidential candidates, writes about the tariff, and invents cheerful romances in order that your enjoyment may be perfect when the morning paper strays your way.

The newspaper man takes but one excursion to the country, and from that he never returns. When he has worn out his days his comrades carry what is left of him out to the cemetery and lay him down to rest. Then they go back to their work and speak kindly of the lost friend, but they write no obituary resolutions about him. Give them credit for that, and don't forget that now is the time to subscribe.—[Courier-Journal.]

J. H. Wade, No. 49 Water st., Louisville, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters entirely cured me of dyspepsia."

What the Louisville Democrat Would Like to Know.

How high Thos. L. Jones kicked before he fell into the arms of his noble kinsman, Richard A. Jones?

How a man who makes a claim to votes cast in violation of instructions from the Owen democracy in convention assembled, can consistently call the pot black?

How a man who withdraws his neg from a race on the home stretch can claim he ought to have the stake?

If it is unfair to win a nomination after all opponents have been retired from the race?

If a nomination by acclamation nominates? and if so, where the cry of fraud comes in, except at the expense of the man who is badly enough demoralized to raise it?

Whether at the end of a call of counties delegates have not a right to change their votes, if they want to, and whether a presiding officer is not bound to give them a reasonable time and opportunity to do so?

Whether the water on the wheel of the mill will ever come back to grind another grist?

When a printer puts his arms around his sweetheart he is going to press.

A pretty girl in a neat calico dress is the best thing we ever saw in print. Walter Evans is clinking rapidly to fame. Already a negro baby has been named for him in this county.

A country church over in Indiana is all torn up over a charge of profanity brought against a young lady member. It appears that a young chap named Damm asked her to marry him, and her reply, on which the charge is based, was: "I'll be Dammed—if I do, sir."

A TYPE-SETTING WONDER.—An inventor of Hartford, Conn., has devised a type-setting machine which he claims will do the work of five men. It is about the size of an ordinary piano, with lettered keys, as the operator touches which, the types take their places with unfailing regularity. The work of distributing is done simultaneously with the typesetting and even more rapidly, so that the cases are always full of type. The chief difficulty heretofore has been in the justifying, but this has now been overcome and is done with twice the rapidity of the ordinary mode.—[Frank Leslie's Illustrated.]

WORD-PAINTING.—A woman's smile is thus described in a Hawaiian romance: "Her rich, red lips parted and there flashed upon the landscape two rows of beautiful white teeth. Slowly her mouth opened, wider and wider. Deeper grew the dimples in her bronze cheeks. Brighter shined the sunbeams in her eyes, until a stray ray, darting through the foliage of an over-hanging bough, illuminated the deep cavern of her mouth, bringing into view the back of her head. Then, seeing us gazing intently at her, she shut her jaw and darkness fell upon the scene."

IF HE HAD THE MEAL.—General John C. Lee tells of a captain in his command who seems to have been a sort of regimental Mark Tapley—always saying something cheery when everybody was down in the mouth. One night when the men came into camp wet, weary, miserable and starving—not a cracker left—the captain bustled about cheerfully and got a bright fire going and then rubbing his hands in the jolliest manner over the fire, he said: "Well, boys, if I had some milk I'd have some mush and milk, if I had some meal."

DENTISTRY AND LONGEVITY.—The introduction of dentistry has contributed wonderfully to longevity. Dr. Goddard, the popular Dean street dentist, Brooklyn, says that the prevention of decay in the mouth of those who give proper care to the teeth has unquestionably protected them from much sickness. He mentions the case of a boy in whose mouth he found thirty cavities as an illustration of his theory that disease in the teeth may be expected to corrupt the whole system.

A Maine newspaper states that at the little town of Sebec, at the outlet of Sebec Lake, Piscataquis county, in the interior, is a tooth-pick factory which is doing a large business, using over a thousand cords of poplar and birch wood annually, and turning out a two horse load of tooth-picks daily.

The next Congress will stand: House, 192 democrats, 120 republicans, 13 third parties. Senate, 38 republicans, 30 democrats, 2 "readjusters." Senator Edmunds was elected President of the Senate pro tem, and will preside at the next session.

How to Cure Headaches.

A new remedy for headaches has been found by Dr. Haley, an Australian physician, who says that for some years past he has found minimum doses of iodide of potassium of great service in frontal headache—that is, a heavy, dull headache, situated over the brow, and accompanied by languor, chilliness and a feeling of general discomfort, with distaste for food, which sometimes approaches to nausea—can be completely removed by a 2-grain dose dissolved in a wineglassful of water and this quietly sipped, the whole quantity being taken in about ten minutes. In many cases, he adds, the effect of these small doses has been simply wonderful, as, for instance, a person who a quarter of an hour before was feeling most miserable and refused all food, wishing only for quietness, would now take a good meal and resume his wonted cheerfulness. If this cure of Dr. Haley's is in reality a practical one, he will merit for the discovery the gratitude of suffering millions.

After a cruise of a few months in the South Pacific, a French man-of-war was recently found to have specimens of living corals growing upon her hull. The interesting discovery has thrown some light on the question of the rapidity of growth of corals. The evidence tends to show that the vessel, on passing a reef of the Gambiela islands, against which she rubbed, had picked up a young fungus, which adhered to the sheathing, and grew to a diameter of nine inches and a weight of two and one-half pounds in nine weeks.—[Popular Science News.]

A Pittsburgh jury gave a verdict against a railroad company for the amount of money stolen from a passenger in a sleeping car. "Since the defendant," said the judge, "sold a ticket for two dollars in addition to the regular rates of passage, and offered the facilities for sleeping as an inducement to pay the extra money, it bound itself to protect its patrons while they were asleep and for the time being helpless."

Captain Webb, the English swimmer who first swam across the British Channel, is now preparing to swim across the Niagara River below the Falls, so that he will pass by the famous whirlpool. These are strange investments that men make of their lives in the hope that they will receive back their lives and money besides. In this case the sum promised to Captain Webb will be paid to his wife if he is killed.

In Dr. Lawes's experiments potatoes were planted six successive years, some on land receiving no manure, and one piece receiving fourteen tons of barnyard manure per acre yearly. The field unmanured rapidly diminished in yield, as might be expected; but the fact most remarkable is that another field, with a dressing of 650 pounds of alkaline salts, produced a better crop than that which had the stable manure.

At the Chicago Railway Exposition is an engine just built for the Southern Pacific Railroad, which weighs, with coal and water 96 tons, and is designed for heavy service on unusual grades. On a level track it can draw all the freight cars that can be made to hold together by ordinary methods. Steam is required to work its reverse lever, and the locomotive itself is a mountain of strength and mechanical construction.

A man at Whitesburg, Whitley county, was convicted of murder a few days ago, and sentenced to the penitentiary for life. The Governor pardoned him on his arrival at Frankfort, and he returned home and has killed another man, which is the fourth one he has slain. The pardon is considered a great outrage.—[Somerset Reporter.]

Jay Gould is going to take a trip around the world, and if he likes it he will buy it.—[Peck's Sun.]

If he does Vanderbilt will order another one just like it, and then every Wall street millionaire will be ambitious to own at least an asterisk.—[Texas Siftings.]

A minister traveling through the west some years ago, asked an old lady on whom he called, what she thought of the doctrine of total depravity. "Oh," she replied, "I think it is a good doctrine, if the people would only act up to it."

DARBY'S

PROPHYLACTIC FLUID.

A Household Article for Universal Family Use.

Eradicates MALARIA.

For Scarlet and Typhoid Fevers, Diphtheria, Sallow, Ulcerated Sore Throat, Small Pox, Measles, and all Contagious Diseases. Persons waiting on the sick should use it freely. Scarlet Fever has never been known to spread where the Fluid was used. Yellow Fever has been cured with it after black vomit had taken place. The worst cases of Diphtheria yield to it.

SMALL-POX and FITTING of Small Pox PREVENTED.

A member of my family was taken with Smallpox. I used the Fluid, the patient was not delirious, was not itted, and was about the house again in three weeks, and no others had it.—J. W. Patterson, Philadelphia.

Diphtheria Prevented.

The physician here used Darby's Fluid very successfully in the treatment of Diphtheria. A. Stillman, Greensboro, Ala.

Scarlet Fever Cured.

The eminent Physician, J. M. HARRIS, M. D., New York, says: "I am convinced that Darby's Prophylactic Fluid is a valuable disinfectant."

Darby's Fluid is recommended by Hon. ALABAMA H. STRAWSON, of Georgia; Rev. CHAS. F. DEANE, D. D., Church of the Strangers, N. Y.; Dr. LAURENCE CUMMINS, Prof. University, S. C.; Rev. A. J. BARTLE, Prof. Mercer University; Rev. Geo. F. PIERCE, Bishop M. E. Church.

INDESTRUCTIBLE TO EVERY ELEMENT. Perfectly harmless. Used internally or externally for Man or Beast. The Fluid has been thoroughly tested, and we have abundant evidence that it has done everything here claimed. For fuller information, send us your Unpaid a pamphlet or send to the proprietors.

THREE ACRES OF EGGS.—A Santa Barbara fisherman has discovered, near San Miguel Island, a smaller island, about three acres in extent, which is probably the largest nest of eggs in the world. The island is covered with a layer of guano in which sea fowls of all descriptions were found laying or incubating their eggs. The surface appeared to be almost covered with eggs, principally those of the sea gulls, shags, and a small bird known as the salt-water duck. The discoverer says it was difficult to walk without treading upon the eggs, and that it would be easy to load a ship with them.—[San Francisco Alta.]

Dr. Hoskins of Vermont says: "Very few persons know the productive-ness of the garden strawberry under good cultivation. I have picked as many as four two gallon baskets from a square rod at a single picking. Crops of 200, and occasionally over 200 bushels to the acre are reported, and 150 bushels are only a fair crop. At ten cents a quart the crop will give a return of $470 per acre, more than half of which is clear profit."

W. H. McKinney, who is to deliver a Choctaw address at the commencement of Keanoke College on the 13th, is the first Indian of full blood to receive a degree from a Virginia college. He is twenty-three years old and has been at the college five years and intends to become a Presbyterian minister.—[Salem (Va.) Register.]

Ex-Gov. A. H. Rice, of Massachusetts, has been unfortunate in his love. His first wildcied early. His wedding day was appointed with a second lady, but she died shortly before. He became engaged to a third lady, whom he married, but she became insane shortly afterwards.

A Chinaman made a bet of $3 with one of his fellows that he could swim across the Sacramento river at Leding, and return. As he failed and went under, his opponent clapped his hands in great glee and quietly pocketed the stakes.

A DISPATCH from Washington to the effect that Col. Jones will run independently for governor has created further talk in this matter, and the Covington Commonwealth puts a short stop to it by saying "Sometime since this paper upon the authority of Col. Jones himself, said he had no intention of running as an independent candidate. Some Kentucky democratic papers, preferring to rely upon the irresponsible statements of anonymous interviewers, have kept up a sort of guerrilla war on Col. Jones. In this they have been unjust to Col. Jones without in any way aiding Mr. Knott."

COMMISSIONER of Internal Revenue Evans is charged with dismissing from the service tried and true men to make room for his favorites and he is catching thunder from nearly every quarter. It is also said that he intends to keep intact all the revenue districts in this State, notwithstanding several could be easily dispensed with, so that none of his Kentucky friends will suffer. Evans is a very small potato and it is not likely he will be able to rise above his old prejudices and administer the affairs of his office for the good of his country.

THE bottom has fallen clean out of the Enquirer-Burnett sensation. The negro Direy, who was to become the scapegoat for Neal and Craft's infamous crimes, proved an indispensible alibi and he was discharged. Burnett who is the hireling of the friends of these fiends, has been shown up in his true character, and if he ever sets foot at either Ashland or Catlettsburg hereafter, a coat of tar and feathers and perhaps a rope around his neck will be given him by the generous but indignant citizens.

THE killing of Town Marshal Freeman at Versailles by the Brown boys was from all accounts a deliberately planned murder. They had an old feud against him and under the guise of drunkenness carried out their intention of killing him. We do not believe in mob justice, but when an officer of the law is shot down in cold blood while in the discharge of his duty, the quickest and surest punishment ought to be inflicted on the guilty scoundrels.

It is not often that the ugly woman is in demand, but one is wanted in Jessamine county. The Lexington Gazette says: "There is a school-house in the edge of Jessamine that can't keep a teacher. Every young lady who goes there stays but a short time, and then gets married and goes off. If there is a lady qualified to teach, mortally ugly and too old to marry, she can get a permanent situation by applying to the Trustees of that school."

THE democrats in Ohio are engaged in making a nominee for governor. The fight is a three-cornered one, Hoadley, Ward and Geddes standing in the order named, as to chances. It is predicted that Hoadley will be nominated. He is decidedly the best and most available man.

In his sermon Sunday, Dr. Talma made the startling statement that there are 250,000 people in New York and Brooklyn who depend upon charitable contributions, principally, for a living. London with her 4,000,000 population has only 100,000 paupers.

FRANK JAMES is getting all the benefits of the law's delay. His trial called at Gallatin, Mo., Tuesday was postponed till August 7th. Between the Governor and the juries, this bold outlaw and murderer stands a good show of getting free of his crimes.

The country newspaper now speaks of the man who has put a new pair of hinges on his gate and set out a lilac bush in his front yard as "making extensive improvements about his residence."—[Boston Transcript.

DORSEY the Chief of the Star route thieves, he it always remembered, is Secretary of the republican National Committee and all the other defendants are republicans. They were prosecuted by a republican administration, tried by a republican judge, and acquitted by a republican jury. But the country has seen greater crimes not only committed but approved by the party which has held continued possession of the Government for twenty-two years.

THE moral to be drawn from the acquittal of the Star-route rogues is that if a man can steal enough from the Government to pay lawyers' fees, suborn newspapers, and pack the jury he can get off without punishment if indicted for dishonesty. But he must be sure to steal at least a million. For smaller offenses his prospects of the penitentiary are good.

It is good news to the boys but bad for the country that the St. Louis School Board has ordered that after Sept. 1, no corporal punishment shall be allowed in the public schools of that city. Many a school boy has been ruined for life by a sporing of the rod, and we expect to see a sweet lot of criminals graduate in the future Great.

Thus from the Glasgow Times is just what we were about to say: "Nothing with a richer cream of humor than the 'Ordinary Conversations' of the Louisville Commercial is floating among our exchanges. They are always enjoyable and their sometimes startlingly correct pen-portraits makes them all the more reliable."

Louisville has one minister to every 200 houses; one physician to every 120, one lawyer to 80 and one whisky or beer saloon to every 30. "The survival of the fittest" will be no easy task there—the unfit are as much more abundant.—[Western Recorder.

THE King of Italy is reported as saying: "I have no ambition save to diminish taxation." Whereupon Waterston exclaims with glee, "another tariff for revenue-only-man heard from."

A successful orchardist says that if he were to live his life over again, he would trim his trees higher and pasture his orchards with sheep in place of plowing or mulching.

Three factories in the United States consume nearly 2,000,000 eggs a year in making the peculiar kind of paper used by photographers known as albumen paper.

NOTES OF CURRENT EVENTS.

—A single cargo of opium at San Francisco was valued at $675,000.

—The number of deaths by the Sunderland, England, disaster has reached 202.

—Fourteen young men, including one from Turkey, were awarded diplomas as Doctors of Medicine at the Hospital College, Louisville, Wednesday.

—Ten suits, for from $5,000 to $20,000 damages, have been brought against the New York and Brooklyn Bridge Company on account of the recent disaster.

—Joe Young, who was hanged at Richmond, Ark., June 1, came to life after the sheriff had turned his body over to his friends as dead and he is still living.

—The chief business of the Chicago speculators just now seem to be wrecking each other. The people will look on impartially, caring little which ship goes under first.

—The jury found John Devoy guilty in the libel suit at New York of August Belmont against the editor of the Irish Nation, and sentenced him to 60 days in the penitentiary.

—O. G. Lyndon convinced his brother Ernest that he ought to sell his farm at Menomonee, Mich., and go West. Arriving at Milwaukee he made Ernest drunk and taking $6,000 from his pocket, eloped with his wife.

—The Illinois Legislature passed a compulsory education bill. This is the fourteenth State to recognize that if all the children are to be educated very many of them must be brought into the schools by compulsion.

—Senator Wade Hampton in his oration at the unveiling of the monument to the Confederate dead in Camden, S. C., said the Confederates were neither rebels nor traitors, but one of the contending parties in a great civil war.

—A balloonist, E. L. Stewart by name, made an ascension in an old-fashioned hot air balloon at Fayette, Mo. At a height of about 2,000 feet the balloon burst and the ascendant fell into a stream and disappeared. His body was afterward recovered.

—A bold and almost successful attempt to escape from jail was made at Richmond this week. A prisoner named Bullock filed his way out of the cell with a saw made of a coat spring, and seizing a shotgun which was lying on a bed in the office, made a break for the door. The jailer managed to clinch with him, however, and held him till help arrived.

—A man who had followed begging for a living died in Cincinnati this week and when an examination of his garret was made money was found hidden in every conceivable place, $340.25 in silver, $250 in greenbacks, $370 was found on his person, $800 in bonds and papers found shows that he owned property in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the city of New Orleans.

—The Soldiers' Home estate, at Washington, covers 502 acres. There are 690 inmates, with 150 out pensioners, who get $8 a month. The revenue is about $160,000 a year, derived in part from $100,000 levied by then, Scott on the City of Mexico for having permitted guerrillas to fire on American troops and from a fee of 12 1/2 cts. a month deducted from the pay of all soldiers in the army.

—The Mississippi is experiencing its third flood this year. At Helena, Ark., the growing crops in the bottom country have been submerged and much damage is threatened.

—Arthur H. Blaney, cashier and head book-keeper for the Massachusetts Loan and Trust Company, at Boston, has confessed to embezzling $41,000. He spent it speculatively.

—A terrific clap of thunder occurred at Frankfort yesterday. It struck a tree near the house of Mr. Ed. Yisler, rendering his whole family unconscious, and as it is reported, almost denuding a negro of her clothing.

—It is a significant fact that while Maine and Missouri were admitted into the Union in the same year, Maine with seven representatives in Congress and Missouri with one, the former now has four members and the latter fourteen.

—The soldiers who have been scouring the mountains of Kentucky in search of Profit and Morrison, the remnant of Barnett's band, returned Wednesday without having found them. The desperadoes evidently thought leg-bail was preferable to penitentiary for life.

—Thirty vessels belonging to a navy that is the wonder of the world are to be sold by Chandler to the junk dealers who shall bid the highest for them. Eighteen of the thirty are steam ships and two of the eighteen are ironclads and they cost in the aggregate $20,313,720.

—The New Hampshire Legislature balloted Wednesday for U. S. Senator. Ewd. H. Rollins received 125, the highest vote cast for any of the six candidates, 165 being necessary to a choice. Senator Rollins is discouraged. There is a strong influence favoring ex-Senator Patterson.

—Kendall, who pleaded guilty to conspiracy with Dorsey, Brady and others in the Star-route affair, Wednesday appeared in court at Washington and was discharged from custody, the Court remarking that "One man can not be guilty of a conspiracy. The jury has acquitted the others and that is enough."

—The spring tide of emigration with those going the golden-slipper route and climbing the golden stairs via the tinclaw-burg line, is immense. The river the crime the more beautiful the slippers, the more brilliantly shining the stairs and the more weirdly sweet the melodious echoes that play along the corridors.—[Bowling Green Gazette.

—In the great Binder trial near Lexington, the Osborn was tried by the best and the Minneapolis the second best of the dozen or so machines represented. The Walter A. Wood agent sold a machine and got a certificate from Mr. Clay, the owner of the grain cut, that the Wood is his choice. Thousands of people witnessed the trials during the day.

—Eight old soldiers of the war of 1812 attended the annual reunion at Paris yesterday. Dr. J. G. Chign, of Lexington, eighty-seven years old, was the youngest, and Dr. C. C. Graham, of Louisville, aged ninety-nine, the oldest. The others were Thomas Jones, Paris, ninety-one; Robert Campbell, Winchester, ninety; Gilead Evans, Nicholas county, eighty-nine; Dr. Perrin, Cynthia, eighty-nine; Moore Johnson, Mt. Sterling, eighty-eight; S. M. Berry, Scott county, eighty-seven.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE

"PRAISE THE LORD"

102 SHACKLEWELL LANE,
DALSTON, LONDON, E. JUNE 21, '83

Dear Interior:

Who has not sighed for that untenable condition on earth, when we could get letters constantly, without the bore of answering them?

May I gently prick the conscience of some of my friends by reminding them that they owe me "ever so many" letters, and that I will compound with them and give a full receipt to date if they will sit down and write one nice, long letter in reply to my many? "While earth remaineth," even love looks for some quid pro quo.

"O, but your letters are printed!" Yes, but not by me. I toiled at the pen for you, honest, painstaking toil, that love turned into pleasure when I thought of the dear eyes that would read the lines. Ah, how many faces before me whenever I sit down to write. How often I say to myself: "—will think to read this?" or "I know what—will write of that." Well, if this gentle reminder brings any response, all right. If not, still it is all right. I will keep on.

Hilgiate, where we are preaching and singing, is a very old suburb of London. And it has always been a favorite one, on account of the exceptional beauty of its position, 450 feet above the level of the Thames, with a ground surface almost as romantically broken as that of Norwich—"How of New England"—air pure and invigorating; the great stretch of Hamstead Heath just beyond it, now by act of Parliament never to be built over, but remain one of London's breathing places for ever; it is no wonder that Hilgiate should be a favorite resort of wealthy people as it is. Miss Burdette Courte, now Mrs. Ashmead Bartlett, has a villa there; and retired merchants and tradesmen have elegant places by the score. The Earl of Mansfield has a grand estate on the edge of Hilgiate, once the property of Lord George Gordon, of the "No Popery" riots, made familiar to many readers of Bernaldy Rudge, who never would have dug the dry details out of a dry history. We rode by the house where Lord George lived, as we were taking an airing day before yesterday, and marked the very spot, down a sequestered lane, where the Conspirators used to assemble on his grounds.

Hamstead Heath, as all know, was one of Dick Turpin's favorite stamping grounds and "Dick Turpin's Oak," where he once hid when pursued by a sheriff's posse, still stands, while a public house, called the "Black Horse," marks one of his favorite haunts and keeps alive the memory of the gallant beast he rode. A portrait of the mare adorns the front window. The fact is, though the man was hung for his crimes, he is a great favorite with the people, great and small, and the spots where his feats were performed are carefully marked and preserved. He was, like Robin Hood in earlier times, or Rob Roy, of Scotland, a favorite of the poor and only held in terror by the rich, upon whom he preyed. All these men would have been Marlboroughs or Wellingtons if the opportunity had come to them; as it was, they were only outlaws. What a wall of paper between a hero and a rogue!

Day before yesterday we took tea with a gentleman who attends our meetings, and but a wall between us and the spot where Coleridge wrote his "Ancient Mariner." His villa was next door to us. A little further down the street stands the house of Iretton—Cromwell's son-in-law—not far from the Whittington Stone, already described in a former letter. This gives England her greatest charm. Every step one takes is over historic ground and one is thrilled at every turn in meeting what has been read about but never realized. Mrs. Steerforth and Rose Bartlett lived at Hilgiate, and George has been trying to identify the old-fashioned red brick in which these unfortunate women hid the one her pride and the other her smothered teleoan passion love. One of the most interesting things we have seen in London is the original MSS of many of Dickens' famous works. They are in the 8. Kensington Museum. There Oliver Twist, The Old Curiosity Shop lie before you as they came from the wondrous pen of genius. It is like a look at the spring where the Mississippi heads. It is England's shame that such men as Dickens and Thackeray passed away without knighthood at least. But they wrote too plainly for that, I fear, and one can scarcely wonder if those who had the power to lift them to the social position, declined to honor the man who had satirized them. It is quite true however that neither knighthood nor baronetcy could lift such men. Only it would have honored the country of their birth to have thus recognized them.

I think our good friend Mr. Wm. Green, in whose carriage we took the airing mentioned above, was rather disgusted when after taking us to the best points and showing us some of the loveliest scenery London affords, he said: "O, papa, it is as pretty as a Kentucky Blue-Grass landscape, isn't it?" Really, it was no prettier, for that is impossible; but I was on the bon with the conclusion and affected not to hear the obnoxious comparison by making him a question. The "whole truth" may not be spoken, for all cannot "bear it"; and one can hardly expect an Englishman to hear, with composure, his own beloved island put second to any place on earth, not to mention an out-of-the-way spot like our own beloved Kentucky.

We have touched the outskirts, at least, of English elegance and refinement in this Hilgiate visit. We have been permitted a glimpse and something more into two beautiful homes where wealth and culture combine to render everything attractive. And I must say that of all the places I have yet seen, the home of an English gentleman is the most charming. Nothing affected or "stuck up." The courtesy is so easy and well bred that you feel at home in five minutes. The elegantly furnished rooms, the exquisite lawn, the costly conservatories, where exotics of fruits and flowers are grown under glass, the well-serviced dinner are all so heartily placed at the disposal of the guests, that one almost forgets the visiting in the "home" feeling of a hearty welcome. The children of an English household are lovely in their affectionate deference to their parents—quite different from the "Young America" with whom I was so familiar. Ephraim preserves the patriarchal features of the household more than Manasseh, which indeed might have been expected. I must try, in comparing the two countries, not oddly, but incidentally, to remember always that the one prides herself on go-ahead-iveness and the other on hold-back-iveness. Conservatism and push will explain nearly all the difference that exists between these chips of the same block. An English gentleman is especially proud of his lawn and his horses. And really both are generally exquisite in beauty. Peaches and plums are grown under glass, as also grapes. We saw half-grown fruits of all three at our friends' houses, and what seemed very funny to us, musk-melon hanging from the frames supporting the vines over our heads, as we walked through the green-house. Mr. Green has an orthodox Scotch garden, who did us the honor to come to the meeting. When asked how he liked the session, he went over the different points he approved, until he came to my exposition of "repentance," when he said: "Ah, sir, there the man rambled a bit!" After I had looked over garden and green-house, I told Mr. Green to say to the good Scot that I had not detected a sign of "rambling" in all his excellent work, which tickled him amazingly, though he blushed to the tips of his ears, too.

From the back of Mr. Wm. Piper's villa, beautifully framed by the ealing of the bay-window, one looks out upon as pretty a view as the eyes could seek to feast upon. The village of Hamstead in the distance, with the graceful tower of Mr. Bickensteth's church (many know him as the author of the poem, "Yesterday, To-day and Forever") rising in the center; Lord Mansfield's park to the right and part of Hamstead Heath to the left; altogether a very lovely landscape. Mr. P. is very proud of his grand beeches, of which he has half a dozen or more prodigious old fellows on his place, many centuries old.

Our meeting at Hilgiate is in the "valley and shadow" of all this gentility and luxury. The dear men who invited me there are really good men, but the whole place is so fright and stiff with genteel surroundings that a good, rattling meeting seems impossible. Rowland Hill, who preached there a good deal in days of yore, used to say that "If the angel Gabriel were to come down and preach, he couldn't move Hilgiate." It is a stiff old gospel-hardened place, to be sure, but just because it has remained so long unmoved, I believe there is a prospect of a shaking among the dry bones, which indeed are very dry.

Sunday afternoon, as the dear LORD would have it, my good Bro. Piper hazarded a good deal in turning us loose among his Sunday-school children. He is Superintendent of an orthodox Congregational Sunday-school, belonging to a stiff organization that stands aloof from evangelistic "excitement." However, we got access to the dear little fellows Sunday afternoon and 300 out of the 250 or 300 confessed the dear Savior. It was amusing to see the almost terrified looks of the old folks, as the "little children" came at Jesus' call.

The meetings however are not held within the sacred precincts of the chapel, but in Old Drill Hall, an abandoned room where the Middlesex Volunteer Rifle Corps used to meet. It is a stuffy little place, holding not more than 150 people, down an alley, with white-washed walls and hard benches and out at all inviting. Like the generality of places used in soul-saving, I am sorry to say, both here and at home. When will Christians take a lesson from the devil and make the results for worship inviting and cheerful? The drinking shops are palaces of comfort and luxury. Hence they are thronged. And if men stupidly expect that other men "in the flesh," which likes comfort and is not naturally inclined towards holy things, anyhow, will come to badly-lodged, badly-furnished poorly-lighted and warmed little mission chapels and gospel halls to sit two hours on an uncomfortable seat to hear a gospel that half the time is no gospel or good news at all, I only wonder any are brought into the fold at all. Ah, if it were not for the imperative outcry of an awakened conscience, or the common yearning of a ruined nature for the God in whose image he once was made, there would be none saved. But those outcries and longings over-ride even bodily discomfort; only ten might be where one is now, if only the saints were as "wise in their generation" as the children of earth in theirs.

All things considered, we are getting along well at Hilgiate. We get up by train and back every night, reaching Shacklewell Lane by 10:30 o'clock. Including children, there have been 231 confessions in the one week of the meeting's continuance. If the brethren have grace and faith to hold on, I believe Hilgiate will be moved as never before. With dear love to those "we left behind us," and still asking continued and fervent, earnest prayers, Ever in Jesus, Geo. D. WEAREN.

—A large crowd attended the Berea commencement, Wednesday.

—It is reported this morning that there was one death and four new cases of small-pox at Berea.

—Machine men are going to and fro from house to house like a honey bee from flower to flower.

—Mr. J. C. Kucker has leased the half interest in the flouring mill of Mr. Billy Smith, for three years. He has full control of the mill now and will run it to its full capacity. He talks of adding a carding factory and grind wool as well as grain.

—We were a little premature in our report of the anticipated wedding; it turned out to be an elopement. Mr. Hiatt, the father of the young lady came down Monday, and with other relatives tried to persuade her that she had better wait while, but she would not hear to them. They saw that she was determined, and then concluded to force her into measures. A guard was stationed around the house and it was thought that escape was impossible, but next morning about daylight she caught the guards napping and skipped out with her beloved to parts unknown.

FOR SALE. - Dr. J. B. Owsley has purchased of R. C. Warren, Esq., the lot lately purchased by him of Mrs. Mary Logan, for $4,000. The Dr. will remove the house which he now lives in this lot and build a fine brick house in its stead.

ESTATE SPRING. - Mr. S. M. Pencock, a Lancaster man, has charge of this famous resort of health and pleasure, this season, which is proof that it will be kept in splendid style. See his "ad" in another column and write to him for particulars.

YESTERDAY two young souls from a region not remote from Stanford made the change from a state of "single blessedness" to that of double happiness, as a young lady expressed it. From time immemorial it has been the custom to take a bridal tour, and in accordance therewith they came through town, stopping long enough to purchase 25c worth of "reasons," peanuts and ginger cakes, after which they proceeded on their journey to Hall's Well, to spend the remainder of the day beneath the spreading branches of the beautiful shade trees adjacent to that watering place. Expenses of trip, including license, $1.75. Sensible people! We have known many a pair to spend their honeymoon in a more expensive manner. The necessities of life afterwards.

KILLER. - Eliza Logan, son of Mr. Hugh Logan, of Hustonville, was killed by the North-bound freight three miles this side of Lebanon, Tuesday night. He was about 25 years of age and had recently married a Miss Harrison of Mitchellburg, whether his remains were brought yesterday for burial. We learn from a railroad man that Logan got on the train at Lebanon and heaved in such a manner that the conductor after repeated remonstrances, had to put him off and nothing further was heard or seen of him till after the freight train passed and his dead body was found. It was fearfully mangled and scattered in every direction. In the weeds some distance off we found one of the unfortunate man's lungs. A little further on a piece of bone was found driven into the side of a cross-tie with such force as to split the solid oak. This seems almost incredible, but a number of men saw it, and several tried in vain to pull out the bone. Still further on the dead man's hand was found in the center of the track. His brains were scattered along the track from the engine guard to the point, twenty yards away, where his body was found. The skull was broken, the upper part of the chest torn open, the breastbone protruding and one leg below the knee nearly all gone. The brain and viscera were nearly all out.

DEATHS. - Mr. Mason Jennings, a farmer and trader, who lived near Millersville, died Tuesday of fever.

—Miss Maggie Dunn, of Richmond, a frequent visitor here, is to be married June 28th, to Mr. Harry Sims.

—Mr. Emoch Barrett, of Casey, and Miss Mary Eliza Floyd, daughter of John T. Floyd, of this county, were married yesterday.

—Miss Alice Livingstone has compromised for $75,000 breach of promise suit against Henry Fleming, of New York, for $15,000.

—It was reported here yesterday that Mr. Alvin Pullins and Miss Emma Swopes, late Mrs. Montgomery, were married at Point Lick this week. It is said that Mr. Pullins had designs in that direction before the lady's first marriage.

—The following came over the wires from McKimney last evening: Mr. A. S. Horton and Miss Hettie Duncan were married at Mr. J. M. Brown's this morning by Eld. Wm. Choyd. The happy couple left immediately for some point in the Rocky Mountains, where they can breathe the balmy zephyrs of the "Sweet Bye-and-bye."

—At 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, in the Baptist church at Hustonville, Mr. Thomas G. Nunnally and Miss Lizzie Riffe were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Rev. Coleman pronouncing the words that bound their lives and hearts together. The attendants were Mr. W. M. Bright and Mrs. Rachel Riffe, Judge T. P. Hill, Jr., and Miss Mattie Nunnally. The bride, who is the very pretty and attractive daughter of Mr. G. W. Riffe, was very handsomely dressed and we are told looked unusually lovely. Mr. Nunnally is a worthy young farmer and will do his best to make the married life so auspiciously begun, as happy as their most sanguine dreams depict it. From the church the pair and a number of their friends repaired to the home of Mr. Lee Nunnally, where the good cheer and partake of the good things that had been prepared by a loving father and mother.

RELIGIOUS.

—There are 5,100 Episcopians in the State, 2,300 of whom are in Louisville.

—Rev. B. A. Dawson will preach at the Court-House Sunday at 11 o'clock. Rev. J. M. Bruce will preach at Providence.

—The latest move against the "Rev." Gould and his Lieutenants, is a suit for $1,000 damages instituted by the old colored preacher, whom they so cowardly kicked and buffed.

—Rev. H. C. Morrison, assisted by Rev. J. K. Wright, of Georgetown, is holding a protracted meeting at Bright's School-house. No additions yet, but much interest manifested. Mr. Morrison will preach at his usual appointments Sunday.

—At the Southern Methodist church in this city last Sabbath, a most remarkable sight was witnessed, that of two brothers, both octogenarians, occupying the pulpit together. Bishop Kavanaugh is in his 82d year and his brother, Dr. Ben. T. Kavanaugh, nearly 80. At 11 o'clock in the morning the Bishop preached a sermon of wonderful power and in the evening the doctor preached a most admirable discourse. Such events seldom occur in one's life-time. [Clark County Democrat.]

The Sunday School Convention at Oak Orchard was very largely attended and the exercises were very enjoyable.

The following resolution was offered and adopted by the convention: Resolved, That we appoint a Sunday school Board in Tates Creek Association, consisting of Brethren J. M. Bruce, H. T. Daniel, John O. Pond, J. Speed Smith and D. A. Chesnut, and that we request them to employ as soon as possible, a Sunday school missionary and superintendent to labor in our bounds.

—Without Scrip or Parole, or the Mountain Evangelist, Geo. D. Barnes, is the title of Mr. F. Price's new book, for which the admirers of that good man have looked for with much impatience, and it is now ready for delivery. It is a handsome bound volume of 631 pages, and besides several pages of fine illustrations, it is a splendid treatise on the life of the evangelist, a good picture of his life and the plan of his life, the vanished city. Beginning with a history of his immediate ancestors, the author follows Mr. Barnes from childhood, boyhood and young manhood to the present time and a more interesting and enterprising story could hardly be imagined. His missionary work of seven years in India, with copious extracts from his diary, his pastorate at Stanford, life at Pink Cottage, evangelizing in the mountains, with a daily record kept by him of the latter, are all treated with a master pen and the volume will be appreciated not only by the followers of Mr. Barnes, but by all who love to read of the self sacrifice and earnest devotion of a man who has given himself up entirely to the service of his Master. The book will be sold entirely by subscription at $3.50. A copy can be seen at this office where subscriptions can be left until further notice.

LAND, STOCK AND CROP.

No mutton on the market.

BOYLE COUNTY.

Danville.

—Eliza Harman and Sallie Johnson and James E. Woodridge and Nancy E. Harman obtained license to marry Tuesday evening.

—Felix Fisher's fine farm of 420 acres was sold at public sale on Wednesday, to Mr. John M. Van Meter, of Fayette; the price paid was $62.50 per acre; one-fifth cash, the balance to be paid in one, two, three and four years. Mr. Van Meter, who is a son-in-law of Dr. H. S. Yerkes, will shortly move here with his family.

—The gentlemen's Billiard Club of Danville, has moved its tables to the north room in the first floor of the Clenden House, on 4th street. It is so "old" that the town authorities have such an antipathy to billiards and persistently refuse to license hotel keepers and others to keep public tables. The game of billiards is just as harmless as croquet and is no more of a gambling game, while it is one very much enjoyed by many gentlemen who have a leisure hour to spend and who do not care to go to the expense of a private table.

—For some time past many Danville men and boys have been popping away with target guns at English sparrows and other objects on the public streets and other places, and many predictions have been made that something serious would result from such carelessness, and sure enough on Tuesday evening Ed. Flanagan shot Blind Johnson in the neck with a 22 cartridge from one of these "vile guns." The shooting was accidental, but the hurting was all the same as though it had been premeditated. Dr. J. C. Boggs probed for the ball but was unable to find it.

—Hon. A. C. Talbot, democratic nominee for representative in the next Legislature, has no opposition up to the present time and it is thought will have none. He is the candidate of the Boyle county democracy, and if elected will legislate for the whole people, and not for any faction in or out of his party. His friends believing this, will give him a united support and his opponents knowing their man, will be careful how they risk one of their number to almost certain defeat. Many of those who regard his election sure, are already discussing the propriety of placing him in the Speaker's chair, and others mention him enthusiastically as a suitable successor to Gen. John S. Williams in the United States Senate. Mr. Talbot's ability and varied experience in public affairs eminently fit him for any position to which he may be called.

—The festivities of Centre College which have been going on part of last week and all of this up to the present time will close to-day (Thursday) according to the following programme, plentifully interspersed with music and prayer: Disquisition, Geo. Hauser Barbour, Elmton, Ky.—Subject, The Ministry of Fact; Disquisition, Rev. F. H.
